Haverhill, MA – May 21, 2008 – Adamson Industries Corp, a leading provider of law enforcement vehicle equipment and upfit services, today announced the availability of clear Lexan window barriers for law enforcement and public safety vehicles through its catalog and web site www.adamsonindustries.com. The clear Lexan window barriers are designed to protect rear windows from breaking, while providing a friendlier image to the community at large.

Lexan window barriers offer a unique combination of high impact strength, flame retardancy, and thermoformability that fit in most Dodge and Ford police vehicles. These window protectors are fabricated with ¼” Lexan and come with pre-cut vent slots that allow air to flow to the prisoner area. These barriers are easy to clean, and prevent rear windows from being kicked out by prisoners.

“Public safety agencies have been searching for an alternative window barrier other than traditional bars that are prevalent in most law enforcement vehicles,” stated Steve Contarino, President of Adamson Industries. “Prison-style bars are more visually offensive to the public, and the Lexan window barriers help overcome those concerns while offering a good, protective solution that protects prisoners and passengers and prevents broken glass in the rear of the vehicle.”
